CONVERSION OF AMCOR PRIDES

Amcor announces today that the conversion period for the USD 230 million PRIDES convertible notes concluded on November 18, 2006 with 94.5 per cent of the notes converted into equity. Amcor will redeem the remaining notes at their face value of USD 12.6 million today.

Amcor's PRIDES were convertible subordinated debt securities that paid a semi-annual coupon of 7.25% p.a. and gave noteholders a right to convert into American Depositary Receipts (ADRs) of Amcor at a prescribed conversion rate any time prior to November 19, 2006. Each ADR represents four ordinary Amcor shares.

There were 4.6 million PRIDES originally issued for USD 230 million in 1996. Noteholders have, primarily since early June 2006, exercised their right to convert approximately USD 217.4 million worth of PRIDES, resulting in the issue of approximately 43 million Amcor ordinary shares. This total includes approximately 19 million shares to be issued in the near future as a consequence of the conversion of some two million PRIDES on November 16 and 17, 2006.

Amcor is continuing its share buy back program to buy back the shares equivalent to the number of shares arising from the PRIDES conversions. Approximately 10.4 million shares have been bought back since July 2006.

Amcor PRIDES (AMCRP) will no longer be listed on NASDAQ Exchange.
