PART III — NARRATIVE

State below in reasonable detail why Forms 10-K, 20-F, 11-K, 10-Q, 10-D, N-SAR, N-CSR, or the transition report or portion thereof, could not be filed within the prescribed time period.

As disclosed by the Registrant in Item 8.01 of its Current Report on Form 8-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission on August 11, 2014, the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board conducted an inspection of Ernst & Young LLP's ("EY") audits of the Registrant's financial statements included in, and the Registrant's internal control over financial reporting with respect to, the Registrant's Annual Report on Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2013. Following this inspection, EY requested a reevaluation of certain previously-identified deficiencies in the Registrant's Information Technology General Controls ("ITGCs") around the accounting software system and the adequacy of the related compensating review controls, as well as the precision and specificity to which these review controls were executed and documented. Specifically, EY questioned the reliance of the compensating review controls on the accounting software system where the identified ITGC deficiencies originated. Following extensive consultation with EY and other outside advisers, the Registrant's management has now concluded that its compensating review controls did not adequately compensate for the identified ITGC deficiencies, and therefore each of the identified ITGC and compensating review control deficiencies each represent a "material weakness" in internal control over financial reporting. Because the identified material weaknesses relate to the Registrant's accounting software system which is critical in the Registrant's preparation of financial statements, EY and the Registrant are performing additional testing of the Registrant's internal control over financial reporting as of December 31, 2013, and the Registrant's financial statements for each of the three years in the period ended December 31, 2013. As a result, EY will be unable to complete a timely review of the Registrant's Quarterly Report on Form 10-Q for the quarter ended June 30, 2014.
