PLDT increases its broadband subscriber base

MANILA, Philippines, July 12, 2004 Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. has started to initiate aggressive moves to increase its broadband subscriber base and further extend its lead over other broadband providers.

PLDT myDSL already has a dominant market share with over 30,000 subscribers, more subscribers than all other telcos combined. The engine of PLDT's myDSL initial growth came from its existing nationwide infrastructure that the company leveraged and maximized to roll out its broadband service at least cost.

While other telcos are still thinking of spending billions of pesos to roll out a broadband infrastructure, PLDT's was already in place, said Butch Jimenez, Head of the Retail Business Group. It is now our intention to further enhance our network and generate various applications to heighten the broadband experience of our subscribers.

PLDT recently doubled the broadband speeds it offered to its residential subscribers. myDSL now offers speeds of 512 kbps and 768 kbps. PLDT has also developed its own online gaming website, PLDT PLAY that will allow its subscribers to play network-based games without having to go to an Internet café.

PLDT has also tied up with Level-Up, holders of the Philippine rights to the number one online game in the world, Ragnarok. PLDT myDSL subscribers can now easily log on to www.pldtplay.com and play or purchase Ragnarok load through the website. Fees will be conveniently charged to the subscribers' phone bill.

The challenge for PLDT is to combine its broadband infrastructure with relevant content, therefore creating an enriching experience for the subscriber, said Jimenez.

He added that the company intends to build on its partnership with msn.com (Microsoft Network), one of the most popular sites in the Philippines with over 500,000 unique Filipino subscribers through its Hotmail email service. A special youth lifestyle website designed to enhance the broadband experience is also under construction.

We continue to eye data as one of the major growth drivers for the landline business moving forward, and we shall aggressively pursue building this business, added Jimenez.
