VODAFONE AND ROGERS COMMUNICATIONS ANNOUNCE PARTNER MARKET AGREEMENT IN CANADA

Vodafone and Rogers Communications ( Rogers ) - a leading diversified Canadian communications and media company - today jointly announced a new Partner Market agreement.

Under the non-equity agreement, Rogers becomes Vodafone's exclusive partner in Canada and the two companies will explore new business opportunities as well as offer customers a range of products and services, including 4G roaming services.

Multinational customers of Vodafone Global Enterprise will benefit from the addition of Canada to their existing contracts for international managed services. In addition, Rogers will be able to draw on Vodafone's expertise in building and developing 4G mobile broadband networks, working with leading global equipment providers.

Vodafone Group Chief Executive Vittorio Colao said: We are delighted that Rogers has joined our successful Partner Markets community. Canada is an important market as we continuously expand our roaming capabilities across North America.

Rogers CEO Guy Laurence commented: We're focused on significantly improving our customers' experience and believe that the knowledge and resources we will get from this alliance will be a big benefit to our customers. We will draw on expertise and best practices from operators around the world to improve the products and services, like roaming and unified voice solutions, that we offer our consumer and business customers.

Rogers joins Vodafone's Partner Market group of more than 30 telecommunications companies operating in nearly 50 countries. The Partner Market agreement extends Vodafone's international experience, innovation and scale to the Canadian market to generate revenue opportunities, cost savings and value for both companies and their customers.

VODAFONE TO ESTABLISH NEW LONDON HUB FOR PRODUCT AND SERVICES INNOVATION AND DEVELOPMENT

Vodafone Group today announced that it will establish a new hub in London for its global product and services innovation and development activity, bringing it closer to its customers in Europe, Africa and India and enabling the company to benefit from a wealth of technology skills and talent in the UK and Europe.

The hub for Vodafone xone, which will move from its existing base in Silicon Valley to the UK capital, will be responsible for the global development and incubation of new and emerging technologies that complement and augment Vodafone's existing products and services. A team of highly-skilled engineers, technical architects and designers will:

- build and test device prototypes;
- develop new apps and services that complement Vodafone's existing strategy; and
- help accelerate the time it takes to get the very latest technologies into the hands of Vodafone customers.

Vodafone plans to consolidate and expand its xone technology and marketing teams in London who will work closely with their colleagues globally to bring new products and services to market.

Pratapa Bernard has been appointed as the new head of Vodafone xone reporting to Stefano Parisse, Vodafone's consumer services director. Pratapa formerly led Vodafone's consumer services business in emerging markets and succeeds Fay Arjomandi who has decided to leave Vodafone to pursue other opportunities.

Stefano Parisse, Vodafone's consumer services director, said: Establishing a new hub for Vodafone xone in London will bring our product development team closer to the customers it serves. It will allow us to draw on a vast pool of technology talent in the UK and Europe and simplify our development process, enabling us to get the very latest technology into the hands of our customers as quickly as possible.

Vodafone Ventures, Vodafone's capital investment arm, will maintain its headquarters in California and will continue to work with early-stage start-ups in the US. Vodafone Global Enterprise, which serves an increasing number of businesses throughout the US, will also maintain its presence in Silicon Valley.

VODAFONE PUBLISHES FIRST GLOBAL LAW ENFORCEMENT DISCLOSURE REPORT SPANNING 29 COUNTRIES

Vodafone Group today published its first Law Enforcement Disclosure report which provides a detailed insight into the legal frameworks, governance principles and operating procedures associated with responding to demands for assistance from law enforcement and intelligence agencies across 29 countries. The report - which is the first of its kind published anywhere in the world - consists of three sections:

- a detailed overview of the legal, governance and operational factors underpinning law enforcement and intelligence agency access to customers' private data;
- a country-by-country section providing aggregate statistical data where permissible, both from Vodafone's local operations and from official sources, on the volume of demands made by government authorities, and summaries of the outcome of Vodafone's extensive analysis of the extent to which it is lawful to disclose information related to agency and authority demands; and
- a legal annexe summarising the most relevant legislation governing agency and authority access to customer data in each of Vodafone's 29 countries of operation. This information has not previously been published by any operator and is made available by Vodafone on a Creative Commons licence to enable others to expand the body of work over time.

The report covers agency and authority demands for lawful interception and communications data for the period 1 April 2013 to 31 March 2014. It will be updated at least annually in future and can be found online at www.vodafone.com/sustainability/lawenforcement
