United Unveils New Ads

United is launching a new ad campaign to promote its p.s. Premium transcontinental service that connects New York JFK with both Los Angeles (LAX) and San Francisco (SFO). The new 30-second TV spot, created by ad agency McGarryBowen, suggests United's transcon premium cabin service has all the luxurious amenities one would expect to find in premium cabins on international flights, including lie-flat seats, multi-course meals, Wi-Fi and large-screen video monitors. United, which is not a heavy TV advertiser, has chosen to focus one of its infrequent TV campaigns on the carrier's transcontinental service because the routes are among its most heavily-traveled routes. And United can charge more for the p.s. Premium service because of its luxurious touches. Altogether, United has more than 90 round-trip p.s. Premium flights a week from JFK to LAX and SFO. The commercial will air on TV in the New York market, and will be seen digitally in the Los Angeles and San Francisco markets. Outdoor billboards in all three markets also will be part of the ad campaign.
