Recent Developments: Our ability to access the capital markets on favorable terms, or at all, is partially dependent on our credit ratings.

As a result of Moody's Investors Service (Moody's) and Standard & Poor's (S&P) government support assumptions on certain U.S. financial institutions, The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation's Moody's and S&P ratings benefit from one notch of lift. On June 11, 2013, S&P indicated that it is reconsidering its inclusion of government support in its ratings on the eight U.S. bank holding companies that it views as having high systemic importance, including The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation. On June 11, 2013, S&P also revised its outlook on the operating subsidiaries of The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation to stable from negative reflecting the outlook revision on the long-term sovereign credit rating of the United States to stable from negative.

On July 2, 2013, Moody's placed the long-term ratings of three large U.S. trust and custody banks on review for downgrade, including The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation. The short-term debt and deposit ratings for all three banks, including The Bank of New York Mellon Corporation were affirmed at both the bank and holding company levels. Moody's indicated that the review will focus on the long-term profitability challenges facing these very highly-rated institutions, which are driven by aggressive pricing of all three banks' core custody products and services. According to Moody's, the review will also examine the banks' ability to generate more revenue from custody-related services and cut costs, and consider the level of banks' dependence on ancillary revenues that have come under pressure.
