The following is a transcript of a webcast with Al Angrisani, Chief Executive Officer of Harris Interactive Inc., Michael Burns, head of Investor Relations at Harris Interactive Inc. and John Lewis, President of Nielsen Holdings N.V. s Americas business that occurred on November 25, 2013:

Operator: Good day ladies and gentlemen and welcome to the Harris Interactive Update webcast. At this time all participants are in listen-only mode. As a reminder, this call may be recorded. I ll now introduce your host for today s conference, Michael Burns, head of Investor Relations. You may begin.

Mike: Thank you. Good day and thanks for joining us on today s webcast to discuss the just announced news that Harris Interactive is entered into a definitive merger agreement to be acquired by Nielsen.

Before I turn the webcast over to Al, I would like to cover a few matters. For those employees unable to listen into today s webcast, a replay of the entire webcast will be archived and made available for listening. Details regarding how to access that webcast will be provided via email as soon as possible. Disclaimers regarding the transaction that we will be discussing on today s call were provided to you as an attachment to the presentation outlook invites and are incorporated into this presentation by reference. Lastly, we will not be taking Q&A on today s webcast because of legal considerations. I d now like to turn today s webcast over to our President and CEO, Al Angrisani. Al.

Al: Thank you Mike, and hello everyone. As Mike mentioned, the purpose of today s webcast is to discuss the announcement we made a short while ago that the company has entered into a definitive agreement to be acquired by Nielsen. Understandably, with news of this magnitude, all of you no doubt have many questions regarding what this means and how it affects you. It is my intention as we go through today s presentation to share with you as much information as we are able to at this time. So let s begin.

First, as we just said, Nielsen has signed a definitive merger agreement to acquire Harris. Nielsen has agreed to pay $2 per share in cash for all of the company s outstanding shares. Subject to adjustment, as specified in the merger agreement. Next, the transaction is subject to certain conditions including the tender of at least a majority of the outstanding shares of Harris Interactive common stock. Next, assuming that conditions are met, the transaction is expected to close in the first quarter of calendar 2014. Lastly, once closing takes place, Harris will no longer be a standalone public company, but rather will be part of Nielsen.

So, what else can we say about this transaction? There are several positives, if not many positives. First, this transaction validates all of your hard work and the significant contributions to the successful completion of our turnaround at the start of fiscal 2012. Simply put, without you and all that you ve done, today s announcement doesn t happen. The transaction is good for all of our constituents. It s good for our stockholders, they will benefit from among other things, meaningful value upon closing. It s good for our clients, they will benefit from Nielsen s global capabilities, scale and array of additional world-class products and services. And it s good for you, it provides a terrific home where you will be able to grow and innovate. To sum it up. We should be proud of what we ve accomplished by virtue of the offer that we received from such a prominent company in our industry.

Now to give you some perspective on why Nielsen has entered into the agreement that was announced today, I have with me on the phone John Lewis, Nielsen s President for the Americas Group. John.

Edgar Filing: HARRIS INTERACTIVE INC - Form SC TO-C

John:

Thanks Al and hello everyone. I m really delighted to join you this morning to give you insights of why Nielsen has entered into this agreement that was announce today. Al said it very well, the deal is good for everyone in our opinion – your clients, your shareholders, and you. But it's also good for Nielsen, our clients and our associates and I want to give a little bit of insight into why we believe that to be true. For our existing clients, primarily in the CPG Retail space and the Media space, we'll be able to bring in additional offerings of your services and offering and provide better answers to business questions that we get every day. Second, you, Harris, bring us strong client relationships and additional offerings in other industries where intimate knowledge of the consumer is critical and will help us build in those sectors. Third, the combined capabilities of the two of us, Harris and Nielsen will allow Nielsen to better serve the very large multinational client base that it has who are always interested in these global questions about consumer behavior. Lastly, Harris fits well from a portfolio of solutions. Both companies share a commitment to innovation, expertise, practices, in searching to answer client questions about consumer behavior. And the final reason is really important to our success, is the rich expertise in research and analytics that Harris has and has displayed to us. I think the talent from both Nielsen and Harris will benefit from the opportunities we have as a combined entity.

I want to thank Al and the Harris management team for allowing me to speak to you today and I'm looking forward to the combination of the two companies. Al.

Al: Okay, thank you John. Thanks for taking the time to be with us today. Now that you've heard John's perspectives about Nielsen's interest in Harris, let's talk about what this means for you, the employees. Most importantly, your hard work and accomplishments will continue to drive the success of the company during this time of transition and beyond. Next, until the closing takes place, Harris and Nielsen must operate as independent companies and we will continue to conduct our business in the ordinary course. Next, we ask for your support in continuing to meet our commitments to our clients, vendors, business partners, stockholders, and to each other. And then finally, as the transaction will not close this calendar year, you should complete all calendar year 2014 planning, including your benefits enrollment.

Now let's discuss what this transaction means for our client relationships. Our valued client relationship will not change and we need to continue to provide our clients with the same great level of service, insight, and delivery they have come to expect from us over the years. Further, we expect our existing account relationships to continue uninterrupted just as they would in the normal course of business.

In terms of how this news of this transaction should be handled with our clients, you should tell your clients that we are excited about this transaction and what it means for our future, especially because they will benefit from us joining forces with a larger company that has complementary products and services that you just heard John Lewis describe. Additionally, we will be contacting clients with more details as soon as possible and are actively developing specific talking points which will be given to client-facing employees. Now with news of this magnitude, it's possible that you may receive media or investor inquiries. You should not handle these yourselves, but rather should refer all such inquiries to Mike Burns.

So what happens next? So summarize, continue to operate business as usual and focus on meeting client needs, managing expenses, and delivering revenue. Also, a subsidiary of Nielsen – a subsidiary of Nielsen will commence a tender offer that will ask our stockholders to tender their shares into the offer for the purchase price consideration. If Nielsen receives more than 50 percent of our outstanding shares in the tender offer, and the other conditions are met, Nielsen will purchase all tendered shares and complete the backend merger without the need for stockholder approval. We will do our best to keep you informed as the transaction progresses toward closing, to the extent that we can. Any questions that you have at this time should be directed either to your direct supervisor or you HR representative.

Edgar Filing: HARRIS INTERACTIVE INC - Form SC TO-C

That's all the information that we have to share for now. As I said in my note to all of you earlier today, I want to thank you for your hard work and dedication. It's made today's announcement possible and as a result, Harris Interactive is well positioned for an exciting future with Nielsen. Thank you and Mark or Mike, I'll turn that back over to the operator or to Mike Burns.

Mike: Actually, Al, I'll take it. And just want to say thank you Al and John for your comments and the information that you provided on today's webcast. This concludes the webcast.

Operator: Ladies and gentlemen, thank you for participating in today's webcast. This concludes today's program. You may all disconnect. Everyone, have a great day.
