Dear Fellow Stockholder:

In a televised interview with CNBC yesterday, Carl Icahn said that he had offered "in private conversations with your Board and management" to suggest "another large shareholder" who could serve in lieu of himself if "we" did not want him on your Board. Now that Carl Icahn has chosen to publicly disclose selective parts of these confidential conversations, we feel it is important to set the record straight:

- Carl Icahn has not given us the name of "another large shareholder" who could serve in lieu of him. Although we offered to work with Carl Icahn to identify two mutually acceptable, well qualified independent directors to add to your Board "one immediately, and an additional candidate as soon as practicable" Carl Icahn has refused to cooperate.
- In fact, Carl Icahn has only suggested that an employee from his hedge fund staff, such as 34 year-old Keith Meister, and an additional independent director to be identified, could be added to the Board in lieu of himself. We, therefore, do not believe that Carl Icahn is sincere when he says that he is committed to serving on Motorola's Board. We question "as should you" whether Carl Icahn will act in the best interests of all Motorola stockholders, or just in the best interest of Carl Icahn.

We note that in another proxy contest in 2003, Carl Icahn sought to nominate Keith Meister to a company's board of directors. In that contest, Institutional Shareholder Services (ISS), the proxy advisory firm, questioned Keith Meister's limited financial background, commenting that his experience included only "two years as a junior analyst at Lazard Freres and short stints at Northstar Capital Partners and J Net Ventures".*

In that contest, ISS recommended against Keith Meister's nomination, citing concerns "about the division of Keith Meister's interest in representing shareholders" due to his affiliation with Carl Icahn.*

As for the additional independent director to be identified "we certainly agreed with Carl Icahn to do that, and have stated so publicly on numerous occasions. But Carl Icahn said that was insufficient unless one of his own employees was named to Motorola's Board.

That Carl Icahn asked your Board to consider appointing to your Board an unqualified employee of his hedge fund, such as Keith Meister, displays a dismaying lack of concern for Motorola's stockholders.

- Carl Icahn already serves on a staggering number of boards, sitting on as many as eight boards and serving as the chairman of at least four. On top of that, Carl

Icahn is currently committing significant time and resources to an attempted takeover of WCI Communities (where he is also seeking a Board seat in yet another proxy contest).

- Even Carl Icahn admits that sitting on too many boards is a bad idea. In Carl Icahn's own words:

“How can a guy be on eight boards and know what the hell he’s doing? These companies are complicated and you have tremendous competition from abroad. How can somebody sit on a board – even if he’s the smartest guy in the world – if he was Einstein – and understand what that company is doing?”*

*CNBC’s Closing Bell
November 2006 (replayed on May 1, 2007)*

“You go to a board and you got eight guys and they’re on six different boards. Even Einstein couldn’t handle that.”*

*Bloomberg
January 24, 2007*

- Carl Icahn claims he will “dump” some of his other board memberships if he is elected to your Board, so that he has “less than six” directorships. We think this willingness to “dump” his other board memberships reflects a lack of commitment and dedication and raises doubts as to the length of time Carl Icahn expects to serve on any given Board, including Motorola’s Board. We are also curious – as you should be – which board memberships he plans to “dump.”
- Carl Icahn indicated to your management and Board that he would drop his demand for a Board seat if we were to pursue his ill-advised, highly leveraged share repurchase. Carl Icahn’s willingness to drop his proxy contest if we were to pursue his ill-advised, highly leveraged share repurchase reveals his true motives: Carl Icahn is subverting our nomination process to achieve a narrowly focused and short-term agenda, and he does not have a sincere desire to represent you on Motorola’s Board. Motorola’s May 7th Annual Meeting is only days away. As a stockholder of Motorola, ask yourself whether someone like Carl Icahn, who is overcommitted elsewhere and underinformed about Motorola, would be a constructive addition to your Board.

MOTOROLA’S BOARD OF DIRECTORS IS UNANIMOUS IN ITS OPPOSITION TO CARL ICAHN’S NOMINATION AND URGES ALL STOCKHOLDERS TO DISCARD CARL ICAHN’S GOLD PROXY CARD AND RE-ELECT YOUR BOARD ON THE WHITE PROXY CARD TODAY.
